"I AM A DEMOCRAT."

Judge Parker, in his speech of acceptance, did not add to the sum of human knowledge concerning his position as a Democrat who is better and more courageous than his party. He thanked the committee on nomination for the confidence shown by the convention in not re-considering his nomination after he had telegraphed that he considered the gold standard as irrevocably fixed by law. This was substantially an apology for that telegram. The Judge did not further offend the Bryan wing of the party by reiterating his conviction regarding the stability of the gold standard law, or by expanding his views on the financial question. He rested on his telegram and in all other things followed the motto of his political mentor, David B. Hill, "I am a Democrat."

He is a Democrat on the labor question and will go with his party when he knows whether it is for or against the labor unions or the employers of labor who oppose the unions; he is a Democrat on imperialism and will act with his party on any policy regarding the Philippines when he knows what that policy is, whether for immediate settlement or an indefinite time and condition for the inauguration of the tariff and in favor of tariff reform but explains to the opponents of that policy that they need not fear for the Republican Senate will protect the country from such a Democratic policy during its incumbency of office if he should be elected; and he gives further assurance by declaring that he will not be a candidate for re-election so as to endanger the future by continuing a Democratic administration after a Republican Senate may have been removed as a brake on free trade.

In fact Judge Parker takes no definite stand on any question beyond that of assuring his party that he is a Democrat now as he was in 1896 and 1900, notwithstanding his offense in sending a telegram to the convention stating that he believed the gold standard law irrevocable, after that convention had deliberately refused to adopt that position.

Judge Parker straddled every question at issue which he discussed and did not even mention that most recent Democratic issue regarding the Panama Canal which Senator Gorman raised in the United States Senate last winter by holding up the treaty with Panama and denouncing the Administration of irreconcilable and complicity in the revolution on the Isthmus. Did the candidate consult Senator Gorman and follow his advice in this silence or did he find it impossible to straddle the Panama Canal like another Colossus of Rhodes?

The effect of Judge Parker's speech of acceptance has been to emphasize the contest as to the control of Congress. If the Democratic party should be able to control the legislative branch of the government, Judge Parker as President would be a Democrat and sign whatever bills Congress sent to him.

CLIQUE'S PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

The Democratic clique has formulated plans, according to what occurred here within the past day or so, to abandon national issues. It has it in mind not to present to the people in certain districts of the county the issues as they are affecting the welfare of the country and people, but to trump up charges about this man, that one and the other on the Republican ticket. As an illustration of this they are known to have agreed that national matters must not be discussed in certain sections of the county, especially the sections that are Republican strongholds. This is not because that clique does not want Henry G. Davis and the Sphinx in New York state elected, but as a matter of promoting the welfare of the clique and his ticket and at the same time helping to elect the national ticket on the Democratic side. They are afraid to come before the people on the Democratic national platform, because they know that the people know that platform does not represent what Democracy is said to be. They know the people approve of the strong and aggressive policies of the Republican party, policies that foster industry and development of the country and not measures that tend to retrogression and the tearing down of things that have been built up the past few years under Republican administrations. For these and other reasons they realize that a discussion of national issues would leave them humiliated and routed for men of little faith have been few weeks and it is utterly impossible for them to explain to the voters the change that has come over the party in so short a time. It is a task that cannot be accomplished to convince the people that a political party can hold so earnestly to certain views and policies for eight long years and then at the dictation of a man or two repudiate itself and go before the world and say that it was in error as those years and that it wants now to try something else. The honest thinking man knows that a party that will thus say there was nothing in what it promised and practiced, is not a party that will keep any promises it makes for the future. He knows that a party without works of an honest nature is not a party that could be honest in its pledges. He knows the party that has kept its promise and pledges and has the courage to stand on its record is the party that has proven itself worthy of the people's confidence and is one that will not betray the people and their best interests. For these and other reasons, which show its cowardice, the clique advises the Democrats of the county not to discuss national issues in certain sections of the county, especially in the agricultural and industrial parts. That clique favors also under the belief that its existence is not known in those sections and that the people of those communities have not been apprised of the clique's designs on the welfare of the people, but there is where they are mistakes. They think they can go over the county and appeal to the prejudice of the people. They think that by circulating untrue they can arraign the people against the Republican county ticket. They believe by playing on their imaginations and saying all manner of slanderous things about the county candidates they can get the people to desert the Republican ticket, but they have not counted their chickens right in that they have nothing nearly so good to offer in the shape of candidates and they have not considered the fact that their own party is growing every day in the knowledge that the clique has forced nominees on it that are not acceptable to that party, nor are they agreeable to Republicans. Under the circumstances it will do the clique no good to shrink the responsibilities the national platform brings on it, nor can it hide its own existence and the vicious designs it has on the public welfare by hiding them behind appeals to prejudice. Let every community demand of them a full explanation of why their party repudiated itself in such ignominious manner and then insist that they come from under cover and make a full confession of the plot they have entered into not only to rob the Democratic party of its rights in Harrison county, but also to inflict upon the people a sort of government that will be detrimental to the interests of the county and beneficial to none except the members of the Democratic clique and its hirelings.

The proceedings of the judicial convention to be held here Wednesday by the Democrats of this circuit will be watched with interest by many Democrats of this county. The Democratic clique has promised to support W. Scott of this city, who has been a life-long and loyal Democratic worker and who has devoted more earnest effort to the success of the party than any other Democrat in the county, but it is strongly intimated that that clique is preparing to betray him and break its promise. This will be no surprise, however, since it did the same thing in the county convention as many Democrats will testify and hundreds of old-line Democrats who are in open rebellion to the clique are prepared to see the trick played again. The clique thinks Scott's loyalty to the party will not waver, even though they forsake him in his fight for the nomination for judge, but if that clique finds out they can not nominate their man, they will be for Scott, but first they will work it so as to have him under absolute control, if possible, by attempting to convince him and his friends that the clique has no designs against the public welfare and the best interests of the party.

The Panama Canal is another achievement of which the Democrats complain only because it represents Republican ability to grapple with perplexing and difficult problems.

"Ours is a world power," said Judge Parker in his speech of acceptance, and he might have added, "thanks to the wisdom of the Republican party."

Judge Parker assures the voters that the Democracy is the coming party. The only trouble is that it always arrives four years behind time.

Russel Sage is 88 years of age and rated at $170,000,000. He should be eligible for the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination in 1908.
